Professional nanny Patti DuLaney-Magnole caters to South Florida parents

Cooper City – April 6, 2007 – While TV has Jo Frost, South Florida can tout its own supernanny in Patti DuLaney-Magnole, a former nanny for high-profile couples in the area.

With more than 20 years of experience, DuLaney-Magnole of Cooper City has been using Tracy Hogg's Baby Whisperer method to soothe South Florida babies for over seven years.

"While I was working with a family in 2001, Tracy was hired to teach me her methods and I've been doing it ever since," said DuLaney-Magnole. Hogg died in 2004 of cancer but her famous baby-soothing method continues to thrive through DuLaney-Magnole.

As a child care consultant, DuLaney-Magnole spends three days in her clients' homes teaching them to rely on their child's gestures and body language to help communicate with them.

She's not listed (to the horror of first-time parents looking for her!) but she has no shortage of clients due to Hogg's tried and true methods of helping children sleep through the night in their own beds.

"Parents are working more and are feeling guilty so they start giving in to their children," says DuLaney-Magnole. "When this happens, we have what Tracy called 'accidental parenting' or the 'quick fix': riding the child in the car to get them to sleep or rocking the child to sleep or the tired parent just brings the child into their bed.

"And all it takes is one or two times of the child sleeping in the parents' bed for the child to get into the habit of climbing into bed with Mom and Dad."

DuLaney-Magnole's clients know a good thing when they see it. Many of them give her repeat business when they have their second or third child and all of them have referred her to friends and family members in need of a child care consultant.
